

THE PRINTER'S DEVIL.
Ink-spattered,
Clothing tattered,
With his broom in hand,
Leaning, cleaning,
Rubbing, scrubbing,
Under every stand.
"Proves" the galley:
Then he smiles,
On Satanic pinion
From the news-room
To the sanctum—
Part of his dominion.
Washing roller,
Bringing coal or
Lugging water pail;
Time he wastes not
At the pastepot.
Wrapping up the mail.
In this spirit
There is merit,
Far from tint of shame:
Often gaining,
By his training
Good and honored name.
Legislators,
Great debaters,
Scientific men,
Have arisen
From the prison
of the printer's den.
The Value of a Newspaper.

The following is the experience of a mechanician concerning the benefit of a newspaper:

Ten years ago I lived in a town in Indiana. On returning home one night, for I am a carpenter by trade, I saw a little girl leave my door, and I asked my wife who she was. She said, Mrs. Harris had sent her after their newspaper; which my wife had borrowed. As we sat down to tea my wife said to me, by name:

"I wish you would subscribe for the newspaper: it is so much comfort to me when you are away from home."

"I would like to do so," said I, "but you know I owe a payment on the house and lot. It will be all I can do to meet it."

She replied: "If you will take this paper, I will sew for the tailor to pay for it."

I subscribed for the paper; it came in due time to the shop. While resting one noon and looking over it, I saw an advertisement of the County Commissioners to let a bridge that was to be built. I put in a bid for the bridge, and the job was awarded to me, on which I cleared $300, which enabled me to pay for my house and lot easily, and for the newspaper. If I had not subscribed for the newspaper I should not have known anything about the contract, and could not have met my payment on my house and lot. A mechanic never loses anything by taking a newspaper.

Pluck—A Fable.

The hopelessness of any one's accomplishing anything without pluck is illustrated by an old East Indian fable. A mouse that dwelt near the abode of a great magician was kept in such a constant distress by its fear of a cat, that the magician, taking pity on it, turned it into a dog. Immediately it began to suffer from fear of a dog, so the magician turned it into a dog. Then it began to suffer from fear of a tiger, and the magician turned it into a tiger. Then it began to suffer from its fears of hunters, and the magician, in disgust, said, "Be a mouse again, then. As you have only the heart of a mouse, it is impossible to help you by giving you the body of a noble animal." And the poor creature again became a mouse.

It is the same with a mouse-hearted man. He may be clothed with the powers, and placed in the position of brave men, but he will always act like a mouse; and public opinion is usually the great magician that finally says to such a person, "Go back to your obscurity again. You have only the heart of a mouse; and it is useless to try to make a lion of you."

THE HEALTHFULNESS OF LEMONS.—When people feel the need of an acid, if they would let vinegar alone and use lemons or apples, they would feel just as well satisfied and received no injury. A suggestion may not come amiss as to a good plan, when lemons are cheap in the market. A person should then purchase several of them at once and save them for use in the warm, wet days of the spring and summer, when acids, especially citric and malic, or the acids of lemons are so great and useful. Press your hand on the lemon and roll it back and fourth briskly on the table to make it squeeze more easily; then press the juice into a bowl or tumbler, never into tin; strain off all the seeds, as they give a bad taste, remove all the pulp from the peels, and boil in water, a pint for a dozen pulps, to extract the acid. A few minutes boiling is enough; then strain the water with the juice of the lemons, put a pound of white sugar to a pint of juice, boil ten minutes; bottle it and your lemonade is ready. Put a teaspoonful or two of this lemon syrup in a glass of water and have a cooling, healthful drink.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.—Francis Langer, a sculptor on Kaaden, but born in Weipert, began to cut the model of Solomon's Temple out of lime tree wood, according to the details given by the historian, Josephus Flavius. For thirty years he worked unceasingly at the laborious work, and at length died in 1850, at the age of 72. His son continued the unfinished work until his death in 1858. Two citizens of Kaaden took the matter in hand, and partly by getting others to follow the plan and details left by Langer succeeded in effecting it. The complete work takes up a space of three hundred and twenty-five feet. The present owners applied to the directors of the Vienna Exhibition as to whether they might exhibit it, and after some delay, received a reply that space should be reserved for it. This result of their labor during so many years requires twenty-eight cases to pack it in and will now be forwarded to the Exhibition in Vienna.
